With F.M.L.

If it is childlike to be innovative, I plead guilty to being age 3.

Compounding this "terrible" sin, I try to innovate in one of the last bastions of Bible Belt Redneckdom.

The best advice, and the hardest to follow, I've received since coming to Central Texas, is to "drive your roots deep." And this to my child-like limitations I have done.

Central Texans have not only found this view different, for a Texas transplant, but difficult to accept. Yankees in considerable number still have us Texans preoccupied with cowboys and Indians and cattle and oil wells on barren plains. And Texans in considerable number have Yankees "carpetbagging" anywhere they circulate, particularly when they cross the Mason-Dixon, which on both counts is absurd.

I find the spectrum of people and types the same on either side of this line, which divides churches, governments, institutions of numerous kinds, which, at this juncture toward the 21st Century, is also absurd.

The great qualities of Texans are the openness of the West Texan the hardiness of the cowboy derivative, two qualities which are essential to any great people and society, old or new.

When Texas runs out of gas and oil, as someday it will, when Texas further populates, as someday it will, these characteristics of openness and hardiness, if they survive the change of development, will be as important as ever. Congestion in many parts of this country and civilized age conspire against these elements that build or modernize societies.

114-114-114

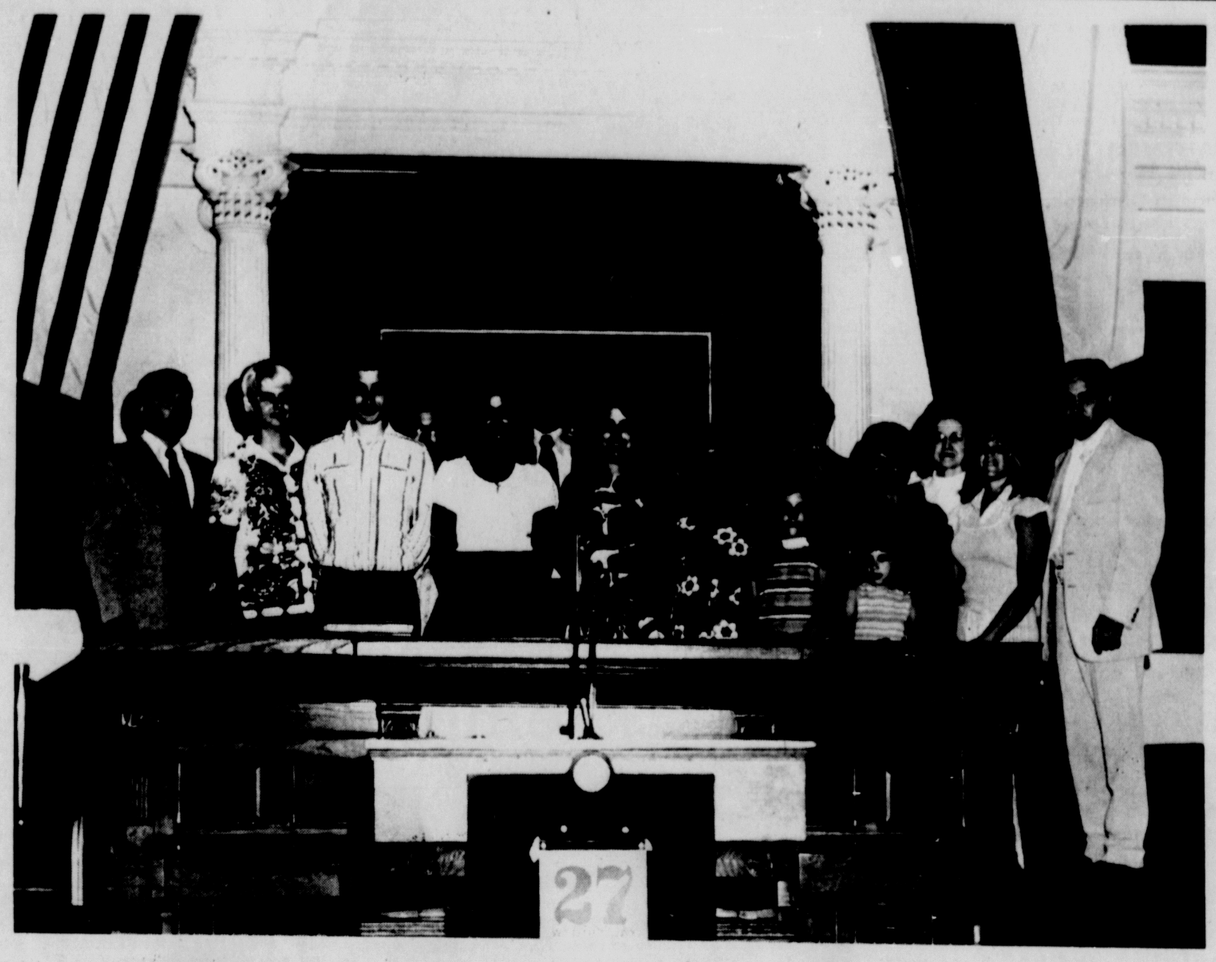

There is hope for types like me. Most of the founders of the Texas Republic were born somewhere else. With a new constitution in the offing and industrialization and internationalized agriculture occuring, this is as much a new Texas as it was a break-away from Mexico that finally joined the Union or foundered before the Civil War.

I take a childlike overview, not having lived long enough for tunnel-vision, but long enough to know the need for regenerative forces. At times, I simply reject the fact that something has not been done. I am disappointed at failure. But as far as I am concerned failure is yesterday, a memory recorded for possible playback, but not for lifestyle or example.

I dream. I inquire. I imagine. I observe. I communicate. Like most 3-year-olds. So might you.

That's awful, isn't it? To learn?

But like a man, I try. Hard. Until somebody's sinews snap. Even mine.

Also on the agenda are recommendations for teacher employment, reassignment of personnel and adjustment of salaries, selection of an auditor, and membership in Region VI service center.

City Planners Request Opinions

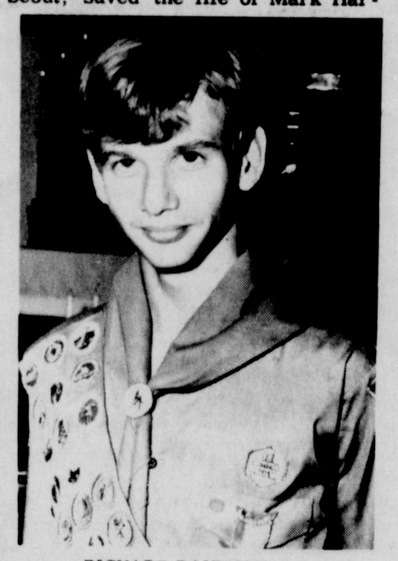

The Cameron Planning Commission is requesting public opinion regarding priority programs to be scheduled with Federal Revenue Sharing funds. A survey ballot appears on page 10 of The Cameron Herald.

Suggested improvement projects are for city-wide cleanup, city beautification, street improvements, garbage and trash disposal, fire protection, parks and recreation, police protection, sewage system, street lighting, water system, cultural civic center facilities. There is also a space for additional projects and comments.

Cameron is receiving about $20,000 each quarter from the revenue sharing program with payments scheduled to continue for 5 years.

Eagle Scout Saves Life

Richard Raymond, 14 and an Eagle Scout, saved the life of Mark Harwell, 15, at the Cameron Country Club, July 4.

RICHARD RAYMOND

Mark apparently jumped into the pool from the diving board, but was unable to come up for air. Noticing him floating face down in the water, David Raymond and Randy Sapp pulled him ashore and Richard Raymond began giving him mouth to mouth resuscitation. Richard said that Mark's eyes were set, his jaws were locked, and he was not breathing.

According to Ernest Moore, Boy Scout Leader for Troop 791 of which Richard is a member, "Richard knew what to do because of his Scout training. When they pulled Mark ashore, Richard recognized Mark needed mouth to mouth resuscitation. He must have been out of air for several minutes."

After Mark was revived, his parents were called. An examination by a doctor showed that Mark was ok. His mother feels that Richard saved her son's life.

Collision Wrecks Pickup On SH77

A pick-up truck driven by Charles Kunz of Cameron was demolished in a collision on SH 77 west of Cameron Monday afternoon. Kunz and a passenger Pete Kunz also of Cameron, were uninjured. Henry J. Widner of Huntsville, driver of the other vehicle, was treated at St. Edward Hospital and released.

Police reported that Kunz was traveling east on SH 77 and Widner was traveling on FM 2095 at the time of the accident.

Library Receives $5,800 Grant

The Cameron Public Library has received a check for $5,800.95 from the Oxsheer Smith Foundation for purchase of books.

Roy Engram, president of the Library board said the board would set a schedule for book purchases with the funds by the Book Selection Committee.

Commissioners Appoint Judges, Discuss New County Jail Project

County Commissioners Monday appointed election judges, discussed plans for cleaning the exterior of the courthouse and replacing present windows; discussed a possible storm sewer along the side of the new county jail, and heard representatives of Lone Star Life Insurance Co. regarding optional health insurance for county employees.

Judge O. B. Harden said architects working on the new jail project were investigating the possibility of chemically cleaning and sealing the courthouse exterior to avoid sandblasting. Plans were also discussed for replacing all of the wooden framed windows with aluminum frame windows using funds received from Federal Revenue Sharing.

Judge Harden told Commissioners that J. B. Earle had been contacted about the possibility of building a storm sewer alongside the new jail site. He noted that drainage had been a problem in that area and said Earle would present his recommendations to commissioners.

In other business, commissioners appointed the following election judges and alternates for 27 polling places Milam County:

40 FOOT LONG beams that supported the South side of the old McLane Wholesale building are hooked to a chain by Bill Harry minutes before they were brought to the ground, intact. Harry, who is in charge of demolishing the 1800's building, said the unusually long beams weigh about 1 1/2 tons and will be used in a house he is constructing. Demolition of the building is to be completed next week clearing the way for a new county jail to be built on the site.

Herald Country Correspondent Gathers News, Can't Quit Writing

By Kathryn Kahler

"I've never had a chance to quit because everyone wants to know what's happened and those who live away like to keep up with the news through the paper," said Mrs. Leroy Guillote, the Herald's country correspondent for Sharp, Tracy, and Friendship.

Mrs. Guillote began as the Herald correspondent five years ago after Mrs. Willie Sharp asked her to take it over. At the time she was recovering from brain surgery to remove a tumor. "Being a correspondent helped me to recover. It was good for me to have to write."

After her surgery, Mrs. Guillote had to relearn many skills such as how to read, how to dial a telephone and how to write. "It's hard for anyone to imagine having to relearn so much. After surgery, it was so hard to retain things in my memory. Living everday was an ordeal," said Mrs. Guillote, speaking very frankly.

"I forgot little things. Once I told a friend that I liked her new car. She told me she'd had it for about a year. There were just so many things I couldn't remember.

"It took over a year before I was really recovering. I think a lot of it depends on yourself and your attitude. I suppose I could have been an invalid all my life if I hadn't wanted to recover," said Mrs. Guillote, a small and rather quiet lady.

Gathering news has not been hard for Mrs. Guillote. "All my kinfolks live at Friendship, and I've lived at Tracy for 28 years so I know most of the people around there. Also the ones who really want the news in the paper, send it in or call me. People are real good about calling. If I had to gather it all myself by calling I'd be on the phone all day, and we have an eight party phone." Assisting Mrs. Guillote are Miss Agnes Rinn of Sharp and Mrs. Velma Walker of Friendship who help her with the news from those two communities.

MRS. LEROY GUILLOTE

This past September Mrs. Guillote broke her wrist in a car wreck and was unable to write the news for a few weeks. But since the active correspondent has been able to use her hand again, she sends her column in faithfully, never missing a week.

Not only does Mrs. Guillote write the Sharp-Tracy-Friendship news, but she also raises parakeets as a hobby. She began with one and new has about 75 birds, which she sells. "I enjoy raising them. They're my tranquilizer."

Mrs. Guillote is also active in the Tracy-Duncan Home Demonstration Club and in the Rockdale TOPS Club (Take Off Pounds Sensibily). She is chairman of the club now. "Since last August I've taken off 20 pounds with TOPS. The whole idea is to learn to take if off yourself. No one follows a diet unless a doctor prescribes it," said Mrs. Guillote, obviously proud of herself.

Mrs. Guillote and her husband, who owns a welding and repair shop at Tracy, have nine children, seven sons and two daughters.

Bureaucratic Dinosaurs...

Mr. Mitchell is appearing before the Ervin Committee this week. He is not expected to corroborate the Dean testimony. Senator Ervin has tried new efforts to get President Nixon to appear before the Committee, which he rejects within constitutional perview.

One government expert, a political scientist and liberal Democrat, said the only way the President could clear allegations is to go through impeachment proceedings.

This is interesting in view of the fact that Democratic Senator Inouye, of Hawaii, who presses questions hard to the core of this Watergate mess, does not favor impeachment or compelling the President's appearance before the Committee and TV cameras.

Abraham Lincoln once appeared before a Congressional committee. Other presidents have refused.

Before testimony of Mitchell and Stans, both of whom are under indictment, is complete, a lot more political lines will be crossed.

People want the complexity called the Presidency to remain above what in Watergate is a high-powered application of old Backroom politics.

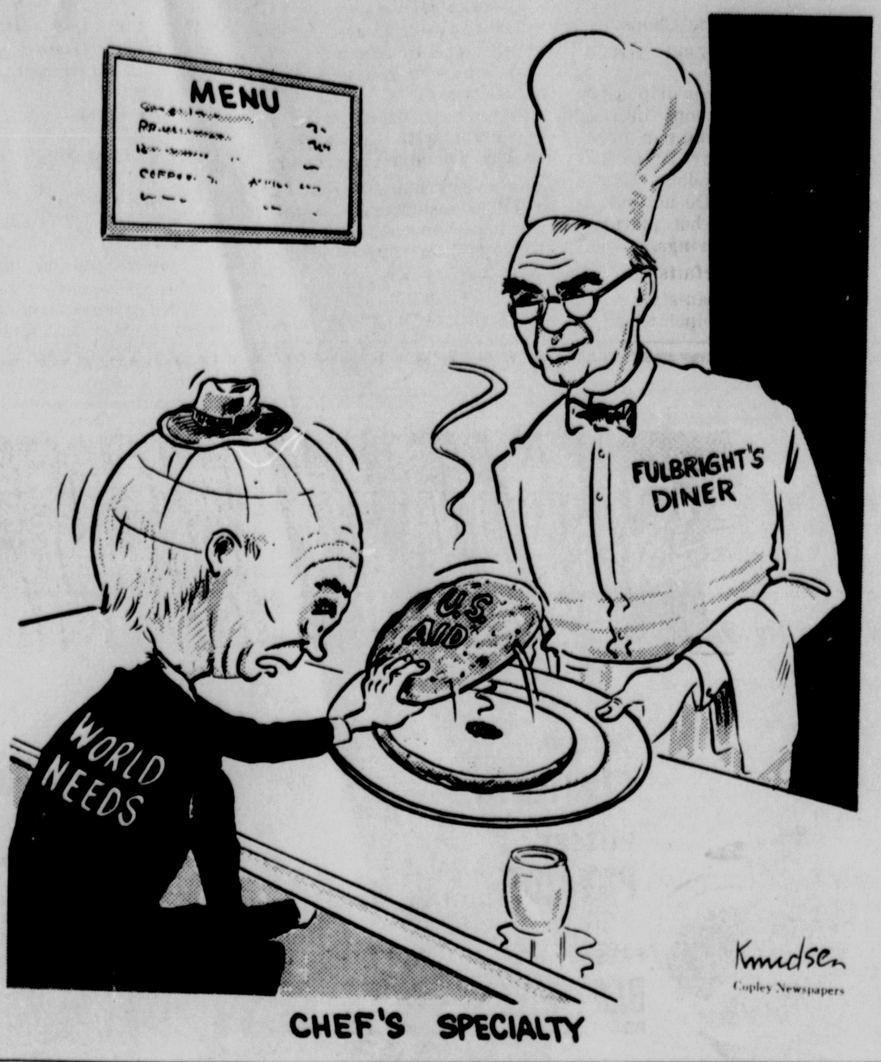

With the Democrats making political mileage from these hearings and grand juries and trials, will the Presidency yield them any more public prestige if the office is neutered or destroyed in the process?

Damage is to elective, which includes representative, government because the executive branch runs things through appointments who inevitably adhere to the appointer's power. They are out of public view, except for incidents like Watergate and high election bankrolling.

We continue to learn too many people are in government, that the executive branch has its political bureaucracy to run the career civil bureaucracy, both subject to and beyond the current benign powers of representative government. One is loyal to transient power, the other to residual power or job permanency, after, of course, the public weal.

Representative branch itself resists change in committee structure, seniority chairmanships and maintains its own staff bureaucracy of appointees.

What the Ervin Committee ultimately will find out about Watergate is that central government is a mire of bureaucratic dinosaurs, currently controlled by the executive, to be reduced in this struggle for balance of power to who knows what.

Premium Drop Predicted On Automobile Insurance

By Bill Boykin

Texas Press Association

AUSTIN, TEX.--Annual public hearings to determine auto insurance rates were held here this week (July 10) amid predictions that premiums will drop again this year.

Insurance Board Chairman Joe Christie expressed hope that evidence will bring a reduction for insurance buyers in most of Texas' 40 statistical rating territories.

This year's hearing was conducted against a backdrop of new legislation and a price freeze which applies to insurance as well as the usual review of accident frequency, claim cost and inflationary factors.

Laws which must be considered are comparative negligence, repeal of the guest statute, personal injury protection and the new deviation or competitive rating plan.

Texas Safety Association will also ask additional credit for persons completing the defensive driving course. Board rules now allow a 10 per cent reduction in auto insurance rates for those certified as having taken the course.

Meanwhile, House Insurance Committee Chairman Rep. Beb Bynum of Amarillo predicted the average premium will drop 10 to 15 per cent when new rates are set this fall.

Competitive rates may mean drops of as much as 20 to 30 per cent for drivers with good safety records, Bynum said.

"Nobody can definitely state what the final rates will be until the statistics and the impact of new insurance laws are weighed in detail after the hearing," said Christie.

REVISION SCHEDULE SET-The Constitutional Revision Commission will meet here July 27-29 to review policy presentations of its seven standing committees on specific areas.

Commission members will hold briefings for the press during the three-day meeting. Members of the Texas Association of Broadcasters will meet with commission members on Friday, July 27.

Commission action on the committee reports will be taken September 6-8 and 13-15.

Consideration of the final document is slated for meetings September 20-22 and 27-29, and the presentation, together with supporting reports, November 1, followed by briefing of legislators in December.

Commission members bogged down at a recent meeting here on adoption of basic guidelines for their mission and postponed consideration of a statement of principles until their July 27-29 meeting.

Instead, they agreed tentatively to write a "revised" constitution--the minimum assignment of voters last November 7 when they directed wheels be set in motion toward over hauling basic state laws. Two members thought even that non-specific commitment was premature.

House and Senate committees, meanwhile, have been named to make preliminary plans for the January-May constitutional convention, draft rules and agree on procedures.

14 MORE GAS SUITS FILED-Atty. Gen. John Hill has filed 14 more suits to recover full market value of royalty gas produced from state lands. The first such suit was filed May 18 against Exxon Corporation.

The state contends it is not limited by long term contracts, nor to any regulated ceiling prices promulgated by the Federal Power Commission.

Defendants, according to state allegations, are selling gas at about 20 cents per 1,000 cubic feet, or less, while the market value is around 45 cents per 1,000 cubic feet.

Suits now filed cover about 80 per cent of all lease contracts involving gas royalties, Hill said.

COURTS SPEAK--A four-year prison term assessed Amarillo former State Rep. Walter Knapp for using $1,200 worth of state-issued postage stamps to buy a used pickup truck was affirmed by the Court of Criminal Appeals, on a three-to-two split vote.

The same court reversed and remanded conviction and 20-year sentence of a Mineral Wells man for alleged delivery of heroin because of testimony concerning beatings by police officers.

AG OPINIONS--Law requiring finance reports by House speakership candidates is clear as to who may and may not contribute, the amounts, extent of expenditures allowed and other matters, Attorney General Hill held.

Department of Public Safety, Hill said in another opinion, is governed by statute which requires certification of accuracy of seller's invoice in purchases through the State Board of Control. Other purchases requiring disbursement by the comptroller form the operator's and chauffer's license fund must be accompanied by the vendor's certification of the invoice's accuracy in the usual manner, Hill continued.

THE FAMILY LAWYER

Attractive Nuisances

When children come to visit, chances are you feel a sense of responsibility for their safety. But suppose a child comes onto your premises without permission—or, perhaps, when you are not even home. Could you be held legally liable in case he gets hurt?

Indeed you can, under the "attractive nuisance doctrine" now in force in most states. This doctrine says you may be responsible for having something hazardous on your property that a child is not likely to see and avoid.

As the name implies, the hazard must be one which youngsters would ordinarily find attractive.

One case involved a tree house in a family's back yard, where neighboring children often came to play. The tree house was wobbly, and one day a youthful climber lost his footing and suffered a bad fall.

Even though the parents were not home at the time of the accident, a court subsequently held them liable. The court said they should have realized, with a hazard so alluring to children, that they were inviting trouble.

Furthermore, the thing must be not only attractive but also a nuisance—that is, faulty in some way.

In another case, a boy was injured when he fell off an old couch in a neighbor's garage. But there was nothing wrong with the couch. It was therefore not an attractive nuisance, a court ruled later, and the householder did not have to pay damages.

Of course, the age of the victim is an important element in the situation. Courts have frequently turned down claims of children over 12, saying they were old enough to have recognized and avoided the particular hazard that brougat them to grief.

Nor does the law expect a home owner to spend major sums of money to clear away minor dangers. It is not his duty, as one judge put it, to make his premises "child proof."

OLD PHILOSOPHER

Dear editar:

According to an article I read in a newspaper the other night while I was resting from working all day watching the Watergate hearings, the television industry has drawn up a code of ethics for commercials shown on children's programs.

One of the rules forbids ads that "exploit children," that claim that "if children have a certain product they are better or stronger than those without it," unless the claim can be documented.

I don't know much about children's programs, except those the networks put out every night for adults, and I guess children shouldn't be exploited when there're so many adults around to be taken in, but I was just thinking. Children may learn faster than we realize and discovering hoakum in childhood may be sound training for adulthood.

For example, there are lots of grownups now who, when they were 8 or 9, scraped up a dime to send off for that advertised marvelous gadget you could put under your tongue and throw your voice. I can still see the ad with the youngster standing there with a smirk on his face while his voice comes out of the ceiling to the amazement of young alike.

Nobody ever learned to use the gadget, all anybody could get with it was a distorted sound that fooled nobody, but a lot of youngsters, after they discarded the thing when they couldn't sell it to a friend at a discount, did learn the first step in not being taken in.

Of course, kids shouldn't be exploited, but a kid that has to eat a special kind of breadfast cereal for four years before he catches on he's not any stronger than the kid down the street who eats oat meal, may have a hard time when he grows up catching on to the fact 50 per cent of what a candidate says maybe ought to be taken with a grain of salt, any kind of salt, not just the special brand he's seen advertised on television.

Yours faithfully,
J. A.

"Low Down" FROM THE Congressional Record

By JOE CRUMP

(A Column for Readers Who Haven't Time to Review the Congressional Record Daily)

CONGRESS PRODDED ON OIL SUPERPORTS

Rep. David C. Treen (La.) ". . . As a sponsor of H.R.7501, an administration-supported bill which would facilitate the construction of deep sea ports, I am pleased to see the leadership which is coming from my state of Louisiana in the development of the superport. . .

"It is now time for Congress to act . . . As a member of the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, one of three House Committees with jurisdiction over this question, I will do all I can to make the superport a reality.

"In my continuing effort to inform my colleagues of the superport developments I am inserting in the Congressional Record (an article) on this subject for their benefit." (The condensed article follows):

(From the New Orleans Times-Picayune):

A corporation representing 13 major oil companies Friday asked the Louisiana Superport Authority to consider adoption of its proposal to build a $278 million offshore oil port as the first stage of a planned Louisiana superport.

William B. Read, president of the oil industry group said the port would be constructed in the Gulf of Mexico waters 21 miles south of Bayou Fourche.

He said all offshore works would be situated in about 110 feet of water.

Read said his group is working with the Louisiana State University Center for Wetland Resources to select the best site that will do the least environmental damage.

Read said the facility is being designed to handle tankers of up to 500,000 deadweight tons. (Japanese are constructing a 477,000 DWT tanker).

Initially, the terminal would be able to pass on 1.7 million barrels of crude per day, an amount he said is comparable to the daily production of the thousands of producing wells offshore Louisiana.

Ultimately the proposed terminal would have a throughput capacity of more than 4 million barrels a day, or almost 25 percent of the entire Nation's daily oil consumption.

CRUMP'S GRASS ROOTS COMMENT

If started at once it would be 1978 before the superport would become operational. There is little time for Congressional dillydallying.

Breakfast Popularity Can be Built with Variety of Smoked and Fresh Pork Cuts

Breakfast, often ordinary or even overlooked, can begin the day in fine fashion if given half a chance. Usually handicapped by routine menu and rushed dining, the morning meal can come into its own on the weekend.

Here's where pork enters the picture to arouse indifferent appetites and renew energy, setting the pace for a bright and productive day. Play it easy with sausage links or patties, bacon, sliced ham or panfried pork chops. Or play it fancy with a Sausage Quiche or Canadian Bacon Parfaits.

The momentum built with such inviting weekend morning meals may carry the good breakfast habit through the week, predicts Reba Staggs, home economist of the National Live Stock & Meat Board.

Panfried Pork Chops

4 to 8 pork chops, cut ½ inch thick
1 tablespoon lard or drippings

Panfry pork chops in hot fat in large frying-pan over moderate heat for 10 to 12 minutes or until done, turning occasionally. Do not overcook. Remove to hot platter. Season. 2 to 4 servings.

Bacon Parfaits

6 slices Canadian-style bacon, cut ½ inch thick
1½ teaspoons prepared mustard
6 pineapple slices
6 cling peach halves
6 slices (3 to 4-inch squares) mozzarella cheese

Spread each slice Canadian-style bacon with ¼ teaspoon prepared mustard. Arrange slices of pineapple in baking pan. Place a slice of Canadian-style bacon on each pineapple slice and top with a cling peach half placed cut side down. Arrange a piece of cheese on each peach half. Bake in a hot oven (400°F.) 15 to 20 minutes or until cheese is melted. 6 servings.

Sausage Quiche

1 pound pork sausage
1 cup flour
½ teaspoon salt
⅓ cup lard
2 to 4 tablespoons ice water
3 eggs
1 tablespoon flour
½ cup grated Swiss cheese
1½ cups milk

To prepare pastry: mix 1 cup flour and salt and cut in lard until crumbs are about the size of small peas. Add ice water, a little at a time, mixing quickly and evenly with a fork until dough just holds in a ball. Use as little water as possible. Roll pastry to about ⅛ inch thickness and line a 9-inch pie pan, allowing ½ inch pastry to extend over edge. Turn overhang under or over and crimp edge. Separate 1 egg, reserving yolk. Beat white until frothy and brush pastry with it. Bake in a moderate oven (350°F.) 20 minutes. To prepare filling while crust is baking: brown pork sausage slowly. Pour off drippings and stir 1 tablespoon flour into sausage. Sprinkle grated cheese on bottom of pastry and add browned sausage. Combine reserved egg yolk with remaining 2 eggs and beat until well mixed. Beat in milk and carefully pour egg-milk mixture over sausage. Return to oven and bake 30 to 35 minutes.

Commodity Futures Prices May Help Ag Producers

COLLEGE STATION Current widely - fluctuating commodity futures prices may help agricultural producers make marketing plans, say two livestock marketing economists with the Texas A&M University System.

Dr. Ed Uvacek and Dr. Ernest Davis, Texas Agricultural Extension Service livestock marketing economists, emphasize that speculation of an end to the price freeze has driven commodity futures prices to new highs during the week of July 4.

"At the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, feeder cattle futures prices for September and October have reached the $55 per hundredweight level. During the past week, current cash market prices for feeders have fallen from $3 to $4 per hundredweight," they report.

The Extension economists expect the September and October actual feeder cattle cash prices to be around the $49 to $50 per hundredweight level. Expectations are based upon the belief that the price freeze lift will not be a complete freeze termination. Rather, the economists expect only a partial pass-through of costs will be allowed by the Cost of Living Council.

"If this is the case, then wholesale meat prices--and consequently slaughter cattle prices--will be permitted to move up slowly for the remainder of 1973. Since feed costs through September may move up faster than slaughter cattle prices, feedlots will probably be forced to put downward pressure on feeder cattle prices in the short run," they explain.

If these estimates are correct, then now would be a good time for cattle producers expecting to sell 500 to 800 pound choice feeder cattle in September or October to hedge their cattle on the commodity futures market, if they can sell future contracts in the $55 per hundredweight range, Uvacek and Davis emphasize.

A unit of trading is 42,000 pounds or approximately 65 head of feeder steers, of which 80 percent grade USDA choice or better.

"A producer may secure a futures contract by checking the telephone directory's yellow pages under 'Stocks and Bond Brokers' and contacting the broker of his choice. The producer will be required to put up a $400 margin and pay a $40 round turn broker's fee. The producer should not expect to deliver cattle but can teminate the contract at the due date by merely buying a contract to offset the one he sold earlier," Uvacek and Davis explain.

By taking such action, they add, the producer will hedge or insure himself against a decline in the cash market. Should the market increase, however, the hedge will not permit the producer to fully enjoy the increased benefits from higher feeder prices.

Farm Bureau Sets Market Study Tour

Western Europe -- purchaser of one-third of all U. S. farm exports, will be the destination of the 1973 Texas Farm Bureau Market-Study Tour, according to TFB President J. T. (Red) Woodson.

The tour, which departs from Dallas September 5 and returns there on September 19, is the first the Texas Farm Bureau has sponsored to this area since 1967.

Tour price of $1585 includes all transportation, rooms, meals, tips, transfers, and sightseeing. Further information about the tour may be obtained by writing Texas Farm Bureau European Tour, Box 489, Waco, Texas 76703, or call (817) 772-3030.

Countries to be visited include France, Swtizerland, Germany, Gelgium, Holland and England.

Farmers Can Save On Taxes

"The summer months offer farmers a chance to save on income tax by paying their children for farm work and combining vacation and business trips," says Dr. Wayne Hayenga, economist in agribusiness management for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"A farmer can deduct wages he pays to his children and still claim them as dependents as long as he provides over half of their support. The support test is not hard to meet if the children are living at home," explains the Texas A&M University System specialist. "As long as they earn less than $3,050, the children will not have to pay income tax. Also, dependent children working for parents do not have to pay social security taxes."

The arrangement should be set up with regular hours and regular paychecks. The amount of pay must also be reasonable and for work actually done, cautions the economist.

"A farmer can also deduct business - related expenses from business-vacation trips as long as business is the primary purpose of the trip," continues Hayenga.

TAMU Dairy Major Works At Elm Creek Dairy

Dudley Keng from Cleveland, Texas, a junior at Texas A & M University has been visiting Cameron for the past three weeks.

He is a diary science major a TAMU, and has just arrived back from Pullman, Washington, where he was attending the 68th annual American Dairy Science Association.

Dudley was elected to the office of vice president of the ADSA. This organization promotes the better interest of students in the diary science field. He has been employed at Elm Creek Dairy farm here in Cameron, learning the operational procedures of one of Texas' major dairy farms.

Thiamin Plus in Pork

Serve a pork roast, chops or any other pork cuts and you're supplying your family the best natural source of thiamin. This important member of the B-complex family of vitamins has several vital functions in the body.

Thiamin helps prevent nervousness and irritability, as well as abnormal fatigue. With a sufficient supply of thiamin, there are seldom problems with appetite. This fact is especially important for growing children and teenagers.

Million Dollar Rain For Milam

By Bill McCutchen

Million Dollar Rain-Rain last Friday was easily a million dollar rain for Milam County Farmers and Ranchers. Grain sorghum prospects were excellent over the county virtually assured another bumper maize crop. "Hot spots" in grain sorghum fields were beginning to burn but this rain should add a lot of weight and keep the maize from burning and falling.

One problem remains for some of the later grain sorghum fields and that is sorghum midge. Some spraying has been done over the county for the past week and fields that are blooming should be watched carefully.

The rain will probably cause cotton root rot problems to show up more severly, but the cotton was also needing a rain to avoid a drop of the fruit that was setting. Pastures and ranges of course were greatly benefited. Pastures were beginning to burn and the moisture will carry them a good while longer.

About the only thing the rain didn't help was the good hay crop. Much of the hay was cut and a lot of the rest was flat following high winds that accompanied the rain.

As a whole though, the rains couldn't have come at a better time. They were just excellent and will go a long way towards another good crop this year.

New Johnsongrass Killer Roundup "Glyophosate" made by Monsanto is showing to be very effective on root Johnsongrass according to Dr. Dave Weaver, Cotton Weed Control Specialist.

Dr. Weaver, Frank Kratochvil, and I put out a demonstration on root Johnsongrass July 5th using Roundup, MSMA, DSMA, and Dolapan on heavy stands of root Johnsongrass. Results will be published later.

This material has been giving excellent control of all stages of root Johnsongrass but it is still in experimental stages and probably will not be on the market for two years.

Weaver says that this material will kill crops also, and its main use would probably be on crops following harvest to cut down heavy grass populations. He says that you can spray and plant almost immediately behind this material.

Cotton Insects-Milam County's cotton crop is looking good. Fleahopper populations generally have not been heavy recently and most producers got good control of the cotton boll weevil early. Bollworm populations are subsiding and should generally be left alone in pre-bloom cotton.

The next rapid increase on bollworm eggs will be July 17-21st. Producers should watch cotton closely at this time but don't spray unless absolutely necessary. Beneficial populations are on the increase.

Ag Group Warns Of Shortages

WASHINGTON Members of the House Committee on Agriculture warned the gvernment Cost of Living Council today that acute shortages of dairy, poultry and meat products are bound to begin showing up in the nation's retail grocery stores in a few months unless certain food price freezes are lifted.

Committee Chairman W. R. (Bob) Poage, D-Tex., who led a two-hour informal discussion the members held with James W. McLane, Director, and Ken Fedor, Associate Director, of the Council's "Special Freeze Broup," said:

"We are getting reports every day of more shut down broiler and packing plants. Poultrymen are cutting back on broilers and egg production, and dairymen are selling milk cows for slaughter.

"This is happening because these people can't get a price that equals the cost of feed and lbor and other input items. Broiler producers are destroying chicks a few days old at a loss of 9 cents each rather than feed them out at a loss of 30 cents.

"Unless some action is promptly taken to relieve this situation the American consumer is certain to face not simply high prices, but acute shortages of broilers this fall, and in pork and dairy products by next January. Of course, it takes longer with beef, but the effects will show up there in possibly a year from now."

Farmers Can Save On Fuel

Although farmers are in a priority group to receive special consideration for allocating fuel, it's still vital that they take measures to conserve fuel consumption, emphasizes Henry O'Neal, agricultural engineer for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

What are some of the key things a farmer can do to reduce fuel use? O'Neal lists a few:

Reduce tillage practices. Make just one trip over the field, covering as many operations as possible. For instance, plant and apply herbicides or fertilizer at the same time.

Don't cultivate unless necessary.

Use the right tractor for the job, if there is a choice. Use a light tractor for light jobs and a bigger tractor for heavier jobs. Use a diesel tractor where possible as diesel fuel is more plentiful than gasoline.

Operate the tractor at proper speeds and keep it properly tuned.

Texas Hog Producers Join In . . . Cattle and Calves Marketed Show Increase . . . Above Normal Grazing.

Texas, which is currently 14th in the nation in hog production, is showing a 19 per cent decline in numbers of hogs on farms as of June 1. Nationwide, the number is also down, but by only one per cent.

Hogs kept for breeding purposes on Texas farms totaled 150,000 head, down 18 per cent from a year ago. Market hogs and pigs totaled 810,000 head, down 19 per cent from last year.

Hog farmers in Texas intend to farrow 102,000 sows from now through November; this will be 11 per cent less than farrowings for this period last year. Reasons for the decline include the increased costs of feed and the fact that retail prices are frozen.

The December-May pig crop totaled 729,000 in Texas. This is 18 per cent below the 1972 December-May pig crop. Pigs per litter averaged 7.29 compared to 7.50 last year.

Nationwide, hogs and pigs on farms as of June 1 is down one per cent from a year ago. The December-May 1973 pig crop is estimated at two per cent less than the same period in 1972. Pigs per litter averaged 7.16 compared with 7.32 last year.

Hogs producers intend to farrow 6,000,000 sows now through November, which is virtually unchanged. If intentions are realized and projected pigs per litter are reached, the pig crop will be 43,600,000 head, up one per cent from 1972.

SALES of cattle and calves as well as sheep and goats at auction markets in Texas show an increase compared to a year ago. Hog sales are down from year ago levels, the Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service notes.

Cattle and calves marketed through auctions during May numbered 731,000 head, 26 per cent above a year ago, and 70 per cent above a month ago.

Sheep sales at livestock auctions during May at 230,000 head were 37 per cent above a year ago and 191 per cent above a month ago. Goats sold during May at 36,000 head were 24 per cent above last year and 20 per cent above last month.

Hogs sold during May at 41,000 head were 25 per cent below a year ago, but 21 per cent above a month ago.

EXCELLENT moisture conditions over most of Texas are maintaining ranges and pastures in above normal grazing conditions. Livestock condition is good to excellent. Horn flies and ticks have been bothering livestock but weight losses have not been severe. Rains have ruined some curing hay in East Texas but prospects for third and fourth cuttings are outstanding.

Screwworm outbreaks over the state are minimal compared to a year ago when the screwworm situation was completely out of control. Livestock producers are reminded to continue to submit suspected screwworm samples to the fly laboratory at Mission.

VEGETABLE crops are making good progress in the Hereford-High Plains-Panhandle areas.

Moderate shipments of potatoes and onions are now underway with heavier supplies expected during the latter half of July.

A market news office has been opened in Hereford.

MANUFACTURED dairy products utilized 23 per cent of the 1972 Texas milk production; nationwide, manufacturer dairy products utilized 52 per cent of the 1972 milk production.

Frozen dessert production in Texas totaled 62,656,000 gallons in 1972. This is one per cent below the 1971 production. Ice cream production was three per cent above the 1971 production in Texas.

Cattle Picture Cloudy

Just when the weather is beginning to settle after an unpredictable winter and early spring and the beef picture should begin to brighten for the producer, it's not happening.

"There are a number of things clouding the beef picture at a time when production should be increasing to meet the rapidly growing demand," points out Dr. Ed Uvacek, livestock marketing specialist for the Texas Agriculture Extension Service. "Uncertainty for the future is stemming from consumer meat boycotts, a slowdown in marketings, severe late winter weather followed by spring flooding, a ban on the use of DES as a growth stimulant, price ceilings and increased exporting of pork.

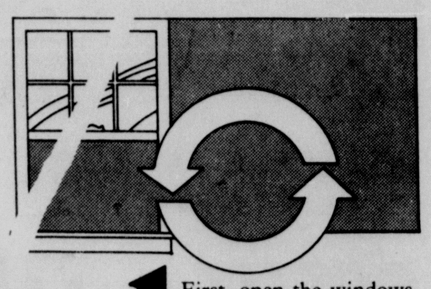

"All these things will influence the red meat supplies that will be available this year. It now looks like those supplies will be less than anticipated even though fed cattle marketings are expected to be five percent greater this spring than last and summer marketings should also be large."

The Texas A&M University specialist contends that higher feeder cattle prices and feed prices are limiting the fed beef output. Future production is being restrained by concern over feed supplies later this year. he points out.

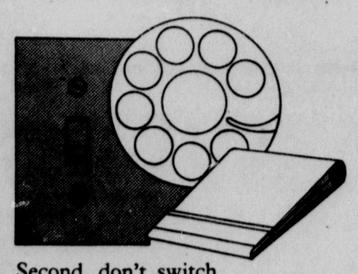

Cow-calf producers should look for a slackening of feeder prices during the summer and fall, according to Uvacek. However, feeder prices will generally stay above the fed cattle market. The specialist advises cow-calf producers to keep an eye on the fed cattle market as changes there could be the key to changes in the feeder market. Higher finishing costs may push downward on feeder prices since price ceilings will not allow a pass-through to consumers.

Your safety is our concern.

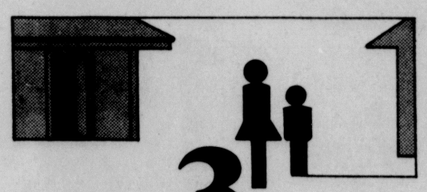

On occasions when you detect the odor of natural gas, it could be coming from the range where a burner may not be turned off completely or from a pilot light that's out. However, if these are functioning properly, and the odor seems to be quite strong—here are 4 easy steps to insure your safety:

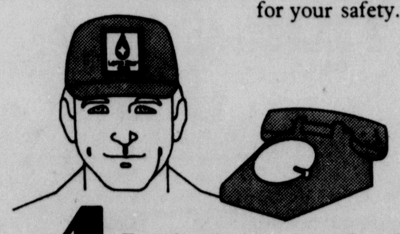

1 First, open the windows and doors to allow ventilation of the room.

2 Second, don't switch anything electrical on or off. Don't use the telephone, and don't light a match.

3 Third, leave the house and go next door to telephone the Fire Department as a precaution for your safety.

4 Fourth, telephone Lone Star Gas and wait until we have checked the source and made certain that you can re-enter safely.

Although you may never have to worry about gas leaks, we at Lone Star feel you should be informed on what to do should the situation occur. Please inform your family of these 4 safety measures, and keep these steps for reference.

Astronomer Believes In Life On Other Planets

By James Pringle

NANKING, CHINA

Reuter--Chinese astronomers believe the United Sates space program is "good," but too expensive.

They also thing there may be life on other planets--but there have been no reported sighting of flying saucers over China since the communists came to power in 1949.

"The moon landings, of course, were quite high achievements," said Vhai Hsian-Tzu, an astronomer who is also scientific secretary at the Purple Mountain Observatory, situated on a beautiful hilltop overlooking Nanking.

"But the American people had to pay a lot for these moon expeditions, and the landings themselves were not so valuable from the angle of astronomy. We in China hold that there is much to do on earth, and we think this earthly work more improtant."

Astronomers at this observatory, which was founded in 1934 and now has more than 200 scientists, confirmed that the Chinese people knew about American and Soviet space exploits, even though no news about them has been published in the official press.

Details--including information that circulates widely in China.

Mr. Chao, who is 45, specilaizes in studying the movement of planets and satellites. He said that sometimes foreign satellites-of which there are now about 2,000--were tracked from Purple Mountain "according to the needs of scientific research" in astronomy.

China's own two satellites, launched in 1970 and 1971, were also observed.

Purple Mountain, a favorite spot for picnics and lovers during pre-communist days, is so called because of its hue in the evening sunlight. The observatory here is one of China's largest.

In the background as Chao spoke, loudspeakers were playing a Tibetan folk tune and astronomers and students from Nanking's colleges were doing "limbering up" exercises and playing badminton.

Chao, whose "Mao" cap and suit do not prevent him looking the very image of an astronomer-bespectacled, calm and studious--said scientists from the observatory periodically went to work on the land "to learn from the poor and middle peasants."

All the astronomers were atheists, he said. "We know through scientific research that the earth occupies no special place in the universe," he explained, citing the work of Copernicus. "This proves statements in the Bible to the effect that God created everything are ridiculous."

He believes there may be life on other planets. "The earth cannot be the only star in the universe which provides conditions for a higher form of life," he said. "As the universe is infinite, this kind of possibility exists."

Asked about the existence of "flying saucers" alleged sightings of which are occasionally reported in western countries, Chao said: "I remember reading news reports about such things before liberation.

"But there have been no reported sightings of flying suacers in China since then."

Asked if he would like to travel by spaceship to the moon or elsewhere in the solar system, he said simply: "Of course, for an astronomer it would be interesting--but it is not a practical possibility."

Standing beside a 200-year old East Han Dynasty celestial globe, part of a collection of ancient Chinese astronomical aids, Chao said he thought pictures taken by the American Apollo spaceship of the other side of the moon were "good."

Shooting Stop To Signal Repair To Ireland Economy

By Patrick Massey

BELFAST

Reuter-Repairing the economy of Northern Ireland, once the shooting stops, may not be as difficult as it seems from a first glance at the ravaged streets of Belfast and Londonderry.

"The vusual impact of the damage is large," said an official of the Ministry of Commerce. "But the overall effect on industry has been comparatively small."

One measure of the destruction is the amount of compensation paid out by Northern Ireland authorities for property damaged between August, 1969, and last March.

During this period a total of $88,322,000 was paid as compensation for buildings burned or blown up, vehicles hijacked and wrecked and other belongings lost.

Most of the wrecked buildings were private houses, bars and shops. Those factories selected as bombing targets were usually small. Officials pointed out that to do effective damage to a large factory complex called for greater risks and higher explosive skills.

Government spokesmen brought out statistics to demonstrate that the bombing and shooting, while exacting a heavy human toll, has done little to slow down production.

These figures showed that only about 800 jobs were permanently lost as a result of bomb damage. Northern Ireland statistics tend to be compiled in terms of jobs lost or created, reflecting the province's preoccupation with its chronically high unemployment rate.

Unemployment is generally regarded as one of the root causes of the whole conflict between a Catholic minority which regarded itself as underprivileged and a Protestant majority fearful of losing its economic advantages in a tight jobs market.

But according to the official figures, this unemployment rate is now actually falling. The latest figures showed the lowest May unemployment figure for seven years.

At 30,681 jobless, this represented 3.9 percent of the work force--still well above the overall British figure but comfortably down on seven and eight per cent levels seen in Northern Ireland recently.

Government spokesmen cite a high level of resilience among ordinary people as a factor in keeping economic life going.

Bombed out shopekeepers swiftly resume business in makeshift huts or in patched up buildings covered with tarpaulin to keep out the rain.

Large numbers of unimployed have set up in suiness as jobbing builders to repair bomb damage. Sometimes, these freelance reapir men are round tendering estimates before the dust has stopped falling on a bombed building.

The worst-hit suffered badly in the Belfast and Londonderry city centers, but their losses have usually been the gain of other shops in the suburbs.

Many small hotels have gone out of business since 1969. Only two large hotels closed in Belfast and they were replaced by two new ones, the Europa and the Russell Court, during the past 18 months.

Bothe the new hotels suffered heavily from bombs. The Europa has been damaged on 14 separate occasions. The Russell Court was forced to close down temporarily last year only a few weeks after its official opening.

At the Europa, every visitor and all his luggage are searched every time he enters the building.

Campaign Starts To Save Crocodile

By Peter Brown

PORT MORESBY, PAPUA

Reuter--An intensive campaign is under way in Papua, New Guinea to save one of the oldest and most reviled creatures on earth, the crocodile.

Fear and greed have decimated the world crocodile population to such an extent that 15 of the 23 different species have been officially classified as threatened with extinction.

The only remaining member of the dinosaur family has almost been shot out of existence in northern Australia and is running low in Africa and South America.

"The main cause of the rapid and dangerous decline of crocodiles in recent years has been the uncontrolled killing for the leather trade," said Max Downes, chief of the wildlife section of Papua-New Guinea's department of agriculture, stock and fisheries.

"Except in Papua, New Guinea, there has been no serious attempt to manage the industry on a sustained yield basis."

At a recent meeting of the International Union for the Conservation of Nature (IUCN)in Africa, scientists adopted a Papua, New Guinea resolution that crocodiles should be a vauable national asset, both as a tourist attraction and as a source of high grade leather.

The conference drew up a five-point plan designed to control the slaughter of the crocodiles.

These were:

--A survey of hide sources, their volume and world usage.

--A survey of Crocodile populations in southeast Asia, West Africa and South Africa.

--Conservation projects for certain species nearing extinction,

--Greater research into crocodile habits and ecology, and

--Establishment of sanctuaries and other fully protected areas for crocodiles.

Papua, New Guinea, a vast Australian-Administered territory, has already made good start to the "save the crocodile" drive with crocodile farms at Moitake, Port Moresby, and on Lake Murray in the western district.

Chief minister Michael Somare recently visited the Lake Murray farm where hundreds of fully-grown crocodiles and thousands of young are being reared and studied with the aim of establishing a full-scale industry.

Raw skins worth more than $1.5 million were exported from Papua, New Guinea in 1965-66 which saw the height of demand built up over 25 years.

Papua, New Guinea is the only country in the world with significant numbers of crocodiles left.

Arnis Revived In Philippines

By Honorato Cable

MANILA

Reuter -- The popularity of martial arts like karate and kung-fu in the Philippines has led to the revival of a native art of fighting known as arnis.

Arnis, similar to fencing, is being included in physical education courses in some schools here and arnis clubs have sprouted in various parts of this Asian archipelago.

The sport requires skills in the art of striking, parrying, offense and defense with a dagger, throwing an opponent and disarming an enemy.

In the days before the Spanish coloniation, arnis was a form of recreation which Filipinos learned together with reading, writing, religion and Sanskrit. It was also a form of combat training for children of the native warrior class.

When the Spanish colonizers landed in the central Philippines they were greeted by natives performing dances using wooden machetes and polished white daggers.

Formal instruction in the sport was discontinued later under the colonizers "civilizing" orders.

Lovers of arnis found a convenient compromise in a ritual known as moro-moro, where Christians engaged in sham battles with Moors, through which the sport is believed to have survived in modified form for many generations.

Through the moro-moro shows, commonly staged here on feast days, arnis continued through the American occupation in the early part of this century.

Students of arnis are taught fundamentals such as the swining stroke, thrust, parry, disarming and wrestling.

They are also trained in an age-old dance known as "sala", where the players exchange swinging strokes and parries and the "sangga ken paoamaan" where both combatants hit and parry in turn and the "larga muton," a free exercise carried out at amazing speed.

The implements used may be of rattan, bamboo or wood measuring either 12 inches or 30 to 32 inches long.

All are between a quarter of an inch and an inch in diameter. Their ends are blunted to minimize injury.

Remy Presas, founder of the modern arnis federation of the Philippines, sees a bright future for the native sport.

LOBSTER POT

The classic American lobster pot, basically unchanged for more than a hundred years, is made of slats nailed to a rectangular or half-round frame. Netting funnels lead the lobsters in to the bait, then to an inner chamber called the "parlor," National Geographic says.

Water marks on cedar and other wood siding can be reduced by applying half steam and half water.

'Last Tango' Sparks Clash

By Martin Dickson

MBABANE, SWAZILAND

Reuter - A plan to show the controversial sex film "Last Tango in Paris" in Mbabane to busloads of wide-eyed tourists from heavily-censored South Africa has sparked off a heated clash between this little mountain kingdom and Pretoria.

Thousands of South Africans are expected to flock to this usually quiet capital if Johannesburg businessman Mannie Memachemson's scheme to screen the film proves successful." "Last Tango" with its explicit sex scenes predictably was banned by South Africa's strict censors.

Faced with the possibility of this mass exodus, south African interior minister Connie Mulder has made a veiled threat to tighten border controls and stop South Africans from seeing the nude cavortings of Marlon Brando and Maria Schneider at $44 a time, including bus-ride and hotel.

"If sex dens in neighboring states are established with the main purpose of luring South African citizens, the government will have no choice but to impose stricter control on travel facilities to those countries," he said.

Swazilands deputy prime minister, Zonke Khumalo, hit back fiercely at South Africa.

"We are not going to be pressured in this matter by any other government," he told reporters. "We would not dare to interfere in South Africa's affairs -- as they should not dare to interfere in ours."

Mulder has also come in for strong criticism in his own country, with Japie Basson, foreign affairs spokesman for the opposition united Party, telling him "it is utterly ridiculous to talk of enforcing South Africa's laws in other states."

Meanwhile, Swazi churchleaders have appealed to prime minister Prince Makhosini Dlamini and his cabinet to see "Last Tango" themselves and decide whether it is fit for public showing, rather than leave the judgement to the government's anti-pronography committee.

The chairman of Swaziland's conference of churches, David Rynd said the Swazi people needed to protect themselves from sex-starved Africans.

If the Swazi authorities decide to let the film be shown it will open toward the end of next month in Mbabanes only full-time cinema -- a small, barn-like building with a corrugated iron roof. The structure was recently gutted by fire and is now being completely renovated.

Swazi cabinet ministers are expected to attend the reopening on July 18 which will feature a showing of the uncontroversial musical "Fiddler on the Roof". A few days later "Last Tango" is due to open its run.

Memachemson explained that he did not think it wise to show a controversial film like "Last Tango" to visiting dignitaries on the opening night.

Behind the clash between the two governments lies a history of official South African distaste for the more permissive standards of censorship prevailing in Swaziland, a former British protectorate of 6,705 square miles. Three of its four borders about South Africa, and visitors can openly but many publications banned in South Africa itself, including Playboy magazine.

But, despite Mulder's threats, it may already be too late to stop some South Africans seeing "Last Tango" For the distributors believe at least one "private" copy has already illegally entered the republic -- to be shown to small, secret groups in the comfort of their own homes.

Looks like a jumbled mass of wires, doesn't it? But to experienced fingers, each line has a meaning, and by plugging the right cord in the right place, a miracle in communication is established.

Much in life seems hopelessly jumbled. Yet so many of our problems can be solved if we cut through the maze of our personal "tangled wires" and get to the heart of the matter. To do this, we need to know what is essential and what is non-essential. We need a sense of values.

In this complicated age, it is hard to simplify things. It is difficult to grasp and understand those basic precepts which have always endured and which will serve us in the years to come.

Go to the church of your choice next Sunday. Listen with open ears, mind, and heart. It may mark the beginning of a new, uncluttered channel of communication for you.

Murray-Go-Round

By Tom Murray

BAYTOWN YANKEE:

Any American League Baseball fan would gaze in astonishment should he sit in on a game involving the Culpepper Indians of the Baytown Optimist Teen-age League. A strangely familiar sight would greet him as tall, angular Dale McDaniel pumps, raises his leading leg eyebrow high, then fogs in a high hard one. Dale, you see, is the six-foot, 15-year old looka-like son of famed New York Yankee Relief-Pitcher Lindy McDaniel.

Young Dale is also a distant cousin to Darrell Royal, another well-known fellow who grew up in Lindy McDaniel's Hometown, Hollis, Oklahoma. Lindy is a Baytown resident in the winter.

BIG RED

When growing up back at Velasco, or being reared as some might say, we were dragged off to the jetties, to the bayour, the canal or to the surf many a day to watch my Daddy stand, or sit, and fish all day. He had a fetish for catching a Redfish. And, I never could understand why, first, he never caught many of those dudes with the black, round beauty mark; or, secondly why he kept on in the face of "discouraging" hours of dragging in speckled trout, croackers, drums, etc. All of which I thought trophies and none of which he was proud.

Now, I have the answer.

A. C. Becker, the Galveston Sports Editor, and a well - known author of the Outdoors, has come out with a beautifully written book on the Channel Bass, or the Redfish. Becker explains that you must have knowledge of the fish's habits, a computer quick mind, the right kind of equipment, a strong consitution, a good arm and a little boy who doesn't bug you too much.

In other words, you must go after Big Red the way Leo Durocher manages the Astros. Scientifically. And, with desire.

My Daddy would have appreciated A. C. Becker's Book. Because, I am certain that he could not understand why those Reds were so hard to catch. But, oh how he tried!

QUICKIES:

Think College Golf won't be strong next spring? If UT's Ben Crenshaw does not turn Pro, he will rejoin Houston's Bill Rogers and Florida's Gary Koch to give the collegians their brightest star quality in years. . .Way Astro Skip Jutze's been playing catcher lately you haven't heard any more newspaper Pap about the sale of Larry Howard, have you?. . .Wow! Houston Westchester's David Clyde gave'em that Bobby Feller show in his Professional debut, didn't he? Eighteen and he strikes out eight Minnesota Twins in five-innings and wins his first pro game. Giddy stuff.

RADIO HOTDOGS:

Oh, those Radio Amateurs!

Dizzy Dean gets away with awful English, as a sports announcer, because he not only enjoys an innate knowledge of baseball but also because he is a genuine American Folk Hero. A most colorful one.

But, some self-styled Sophisticated Radio Stations, apparently believeing that garbled English Ala Ol'Diz profitable, are insulting their listeners.

There are some horrible examples in Houston. Take a word like "Oilers," as in Houston. Well, one "Sports Expert" pronounces that "Aw-lers" as in "Baw-lers." Flip to another station and you get a Carpet Bagger who gives it the New England touch, "I-lers", as in "Eye-lers." Now, look friend, some folks have made fun of our Velasco Drawl for years.

But, I can tell you one thing. My old elementary teacher, Miss Fowler, would frown from Heaven if one of her students pronounced Oilers Awlers or Ilers.

QUICKIES:

A couple more on our Gullible Garblers from Houston Radio: Our Arakon Feller has the Astros winning "Double-hidders," in the "National Lig" and he wants people to know the "Houston Goff Association will play its 1974 tournament at Quell (Quail) Valley." It's enough to make "Lee Trevin-ee-o" frown. Then, there was the Oiler Exec who, when interviewed on the signing of Number One Draft Choice John Matuszak, 6-8, 290-pounds cooed, "Well, first of all John has excellent size."

Bank Board Votes Stock Dividend

Goodhue W. Smith, president of The Citizens National Bank of Cameron announced today that its shareholders and board of directors at separate meetings held July 6, had approved a 9,000 share stock dividend. He said this was made possible by the bank's sound banking practices followed through its many years of successful operation.

This stock dividend, Smith said, would raise the par value of stock outstanding to $ 1,000,000.00 the highest of any bank in the County. The bank's capital, surplus, undivided profits and reserves are now in excess of $3,000,000.00. Total resources are over $22,000-000.00 000.00.

Smith said approval from the office of the Regional Administration of National Banks had been received for the capital increase to be effective July 9, 1973.

US Plans Acquision Of Mariana Islands

By Jon Anderson

SAIPAN

Reuter-The United States is on the way to making its first major territorial acquisition since 1916 when the Virgin Islands were bought from Denmark.

In negotiations just concluded, substantial agreement was reached on a plan to bring the northern Mariana Islands, in the western Pacific, into a commonwealth relationship with the U. S.

In return for offering the islanders American citizenship, the U. S. will gain important new locations for military facilities.

Physically, the new territory will not amount to much-just 14 tiny islands with a land area of 183 square miles and a population of only 13-381. That population is less than a quarter of the U.S. Virgin Islands, and less than half of American Samoa, now the smallest U.S. territory.

The U.S. entered the talks after more then 12 years of indications that the people of the area wanted a closer and more permanent relationship.

A ticklish diplomatic problem was posed, since the Marianas are an integral part of the trust territory of the Pacific islands, commonly known as Micronesia, which has been administered by the U.S. since 1947 under a United Nations agreement.

Talks aimed at ending the trusteeship are also under way with the other five districts that make up the territory.

The people of the Caroline and Marshall islands quite clearly do not want to be a permanent part of the American political family. But last year, American Ambassador Franklin Haydn Williams, who represents President Nixon in the talks, bowed to the insistence of the Marianas leaders and agreed to separate negotiations with the Marianas.

Despite mounting criticism of this course, most recently from a visiting United Nations mission that toured Micronesia in February, the talks proceeded.

The two sides have now agreed that the Marianas will become a commonwealth similar in status to Puerto Rico, but with some notable differences.

Taking note of fears among the Chamorros natives that outside speculators will buy up their choicest property the U. S. agreed to local legislation prohibiting sale of land to anyone not of northern Marianas ancestry.

And while American citizenship will be offered some provision will also be made to accommodate those who might not wish it. This means there will be two categories, most likely U. S. citizens and U. S. nationals.

The primary interest of the United States in the talks was the acquisition of additional land for military installations. Strategically located some 1,500 miles east of Manila, the same distance south of Tokyo and less than 2,000 miles from the Chinese mainland, the islands of the Marianas could be increasingly important to the role of the U. S. in the Pacific and Asia.

The U. S. need for strategic bases has been thrown into sharp focus in recent months with the return of Okinawa to Japan, rumblings from the Philippines that U. S. bases may not always be welcome there, and the pull-out from Vietnam.

Guam, already an important staging area for U. S. military activities in southeast Asia, is geographically part of the Marianas but has been a U. S. territory since 1898. During World War II, however, Guam was badly outflanked and indefensible, falling quickly to the Japanese.

During the final negotiations, Williams told the Marianas people in a radio address that the U. S. planned to acquire the island of Tinian, 110 miles north of Guam,

Salad Time!

As summer appetites begin to lag, perk them up with change-of-pace salads made from fresh fruits and vegetables.

As soon as we say "salad," many of you will think "diet." There is certainly nothing wrong with being concerned about the calories we eat, but there is a lot more to salads than low calories.

Salads can be divided into four types: appetizer or relish; main dish; entree accompaniment; or dessert. They can be hot or cold, tossed, arranged or molded; fruit, vegetable or protein; delicate or hearty.

One thing to remember is that all salads must be prepared with care and imagination. They should be made from the freshest vegetables or fruits, and some care in making them look good should be taken. Whether it is the simplest of salad greens or the most elegant of combinations.

The dressing should enhance the flavors of the salad, never smother, and it should suit the type of salad. There are three basic kinds of salad dressings: French (oil and vinegar types); mayonnaise (which are uncooked); and cooked dressing (often called "salad dressing"). All dressings are adaptations of one of these general types. Different seasonings, different flavored vinegars, and citrus juices are often used for variety. Serve the appropriate dressing for each type of salad.

French dressing is best for appetizer or accompaniment salads; mayonnaise or cooked dressings are best for the hearty main course salads.
